Education and training

Dates	1993–2001
Title of qualification awarded	PhD
Principal subjects/occupational skills covered	My dissertation dealt with the problem of ethnocultural justice in deeply divided societies from the perspective of normative political philosophy. It focused on Will Kymlicka's liberal theory of minority rights, analyzing its consequences for basic concepts of political theory, faced with the challenge of accommodating diversity in an era of increased assertiveness of identity politics. The main conclusion of the research is that institutionalizing the principle of equality between ethnoculturally identified groups may prove necessary for effective accommodation of diversity and for securing equal protection of individual human rights for the members of ethnic minority communities.
