The CASTLE Centre is pleased to invite submissions for the International Workshop “From Asia to the EU: Labour Migration and Social Protection”.

The workshop offers a forum for critical reflection on the ways in which migration reshapes social protection arrangements, access to welfare, care relations, and family support structures in both countries of origin and destination. It welcomes interdisciplinary contributions that examine the social, political, economic, and institutional dimensions of labour migration from South Asia, Southeast Asia, and East Asia to the EU.

Particular attention will be given to the relationship between labour mobility (in the form of mid- to long-term transnational migration) and transnational forms of social protection (understood broadly to include formal, marketized as well as relational – family, community- and network-based – protections) with an emphasis on the inequalities and vulnerabilities that emerge across the migration process. By fostering exchange among scholars working across different disciplinary and geographical contexts, the event aims to contribute to current academic debates on migration governance, migrant labour, transnational family life, and the changing architectures of welfare and protection in an era of intensified mobility.

Conceived as a scientific event dedicated exclusively to academic exchange, the workshop provides a platform for the presentation of original research, theoretical interventions, comparative analyses, and methodological reflections on labour migration and social protection.
